

Leaders in Charity

ABILITYFIRST

Lori Gangemi
CEO

Lori Gangemi has been CEO of AbilityFirst since 2004 and has spearheaded its growth from a $12 million to $20 million organization.

She leads a staff of 270 employees across L.A. County who provide a variety of programs designed to help more than 1,700 children and adults with developmental disabilities achieve their personal best.

In 2020, AbilityFirst merged with FVO Solutions resulting in expanded programs. The organization also launched three new community-based programs between 2017 and 2020: College to Career, ExploreAbility and PossAbility.

Gangemi earned her bachelor's degree in communications from Washington State University and has a 35-year track record of success in the nonprofit arena.

For more than a decade, Gangemi has been active in Vistage, a CEO peer advisory group. She is also a longtime member of the Organization of Women Executives and the Los Angeles Coalition of Service Providers, a collaboration among organizations serving individuals with disabilities in L.A. County.

ADVENTIST HEALTH GLENDALE FOUNDATION

Elizabeth LaBorde
President of Philanthropy

In June 2021, Elizabeth LaBorde joined the Adventist Health Glendale Foundation as president of philanthropy.

In this role, LaBorde leads initiatives to enhance critical healthcare services for the community, including the successful completion of a $2.65 million campaign for The Sam and Grace Carvajal Comprehensive Breast Center to ensure Adventist Health Glendale's 116-year history of healing and service to its communities can continue and expand.

ARMORY CENTER FOR THE ARTS

Leslie A. Ito
Executive Director

Leslie A. Ito is executive director of the Armory Center for the Arts in Pasadena.

Prior to this position, she was president and CEO of the Japanese American Cultural and Community Center, program director for Arts and Health at the California Community Foundation, and director of Grant Programs at the Los Angeles County Arts Commission.

Earlier in her career, Ito served as executive director of Visual Communications and as program associate in the Media, Arts Culture Division at the Ford Foundation in New York. She currently serves as a community trustee for the Durfee Foundation.

A native of Pasadena and a Yonsei, fourth-generation Japanese American, Ito attended Stanford University Graduate School of Business' Executive Program for Nonprofit Leaders. She received a master's in Asian American Studies from UCLA and a bachelor's in American Studies from Mount Holyoke College. Ito and her partner, Steven Wong, have two teens and a timid Doberman.

CANCER SUPPORT COMMUNITY PASADENA

Patricia Ostiller
Executive Director

Patricia Ostiller serves as Executive Director of Cancer Support Community Pasadena. She joined the organization in 2015 as its Development Director and assumed her current position in February 2020.

She is passionate about serving those in the San Gabriel who are facing a cancer diagnosis. "We live in a shared community and it's important to take care of those who are ill. If everyone took care of their little corner of the world, imagine where we'd be. CSCP is my corner."

Patricia is committed to fostering a community of inclusion at CSCP where people of all races, ethnicities, and income levels can find free programs and services as they move forward with a cancer diagnosis.

Born and raised in Indiana, Patricia holds a law degree from Loyola Law School in Los Angeles and earned a bachelor's degree at Northwestern University in Evanston, Ill.

A resident of Altadena, she has been married to Steve Ostiller for 37 years, and they have two adult children, Nick and Kimberly.
